

Understanding Competition Law: An Introduction to the Hong Kong Competition Ordinance

by
Prof. Sandra Marco Colino,
Assistant Professor,
The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Sandra Marco Colino is Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Law of the Chinese University Hong Kong. She is the Director of the Centre for Financial Regulation and Economic Development, and the founding Deputy Director of the European Union Academic Programme in Hong Kong. She specializes in competition law, telecommunications law and European Union law. She holds a PhD from the European University Institute and a Master's Degree (LL.M.) from the University Carlos III of Madrid. She was recently appointed Non-Governmental Adviser for Hong Kong to the International Competition Network, and is a member of the Academic Society for Competition Law.

Course Objective:

This course aims to provide a solid introduction to the application of the Hong Kong Competition Ordinance, in force since December 2015. It will draw from International experience and general competition law principles in order to furnish participants with a thorough understanding of the aims of the new legislation, how it operates and the consequences it will have for Hong Kong.

Course Outline:

Free market economic theory and practice pervades international commerce in an unprecedented and increasingly globalised manner. A cornerstone of free market economic theory is the necessity to remove distortions to competition stemming from anti-competitive agreements and abusive practices.

This course focuses on the substantive and procedural aspects of the Hong Kong Competition Ordinance, the first ever cross-sector competition law of this jurisdiction. To fully understand its implications, the theoretical underpinnings of competition law and policy will be examined, drawing from other selected jurisdictions such as the United States, the European Union and Mainland China.
