Dr. So has delivered over ten 2-hour and 3-hour CPD seminars accredited by the Law Society of Hong Kong and the HKMAAL. Besides, he has also published two journal articles on property in human tissues and several engineering articles on various topics.

Interlocutory commercial injunction is a very common application to be encountered by a solicitor at various stages of litigation, spanning from pre-commencement, interlocutory up to enforcement. Quite often the success or failure in obtaining an injunction will determine whether an intended action is worthwhile to pursue, and may even dispose the entire action.

As pointed out by Lord Hoffman, "[t]he purpose of... an injunction is to improve the chances of the court being able to do justice after the determination of the merits at trial. At the interlocutory stage, the court must therefore assess whether granting or withholding an injunction is more likely to produce a just result." (National Commercial Bank Jamaica Ltd. v Olint Corporation Ltd. (Jamaica) [2009] UKPC 16) But what are the guidelines in governing such an assessment?
